

Fools Gold (A Lord Ambrose Mystery)

Spring, 1833. More consuming than any mystery he has solved is Lord Ambrose's ardor for down-on-her-luck governess Elisabeth Anstruther. To have her hand would bring him untold joy. But when the young lady refuses his proposal, Ambrose smarts from the pain and has a strange feeling that something awful is soon to unfold. Elisabeth has taken up a post as companion to nearby Lady Jesmond, but, within days of the girl's arrival, Sir Antony Jesmond's young doctor lies dead from poison. It looks like a suicide, but the stopper to the bottle of poison has been painstakingly replaced on the night-stand something a man in agony could not have done. Elisabeth knows that the one person capable of solving this mystery is Ambrose. And soon, he too is embroiled in the sinister goings-on at Jesmond Place. Will Lord Ambrose be able to solve the mystery? Or will this case be his last? Praise for the Lord Ambrose mysteries: Crisp, vividly evocative prose, interesting people, arresting plot, and unusual background Kirkus Reviews Excellent prose, solid characterization, and authentic period atmosphere. Library Journal An intriguing Byronic hero. Publishers Weekly This series is going to be a winner.
